ROBERT BURNS

150th Anniversary of The Birth of Scotland's Greatest Poet.

This year marks the one hundred ind fiftleth anniversary of the birth if the most generally beloved of all bets, for Robert Burns was born on lanuary 25, 1759. The lapse of time ias not in any way diminished the ustre of his genius but as year sucleeds year the glow of his fame grows righter and the better his works are tnown and understood the more he is oved and honored. Not only are his wn countrymen and women his arlent admirers but everyone who has eceived an English education has imibed part of Burns' great spirit and hey too revere the memory of the ploughman bard. Not a year passes ut new clubs and societies are formed or the study of his works and to help erpetuate the memory of him who o sweetly sang of love and so bravely dvocated in immortal verse the maesty of manhood. His life has been riticised by many-some justly and incerely, some unjustly and superfihem. It is conceded that his poems tre the most musical in the language. le is pre-eminently the poet of nature and few, if any have approached him n his simple yet touching descriptions of nature's scenes, objects and life. close to the bosom of nature from his wirth he imbued his works with the leart-beats of the common mother of is all. There is the something in his poems that reaches straight to the tuman heart. The glitter and show of he world are forgotten in reading hem and it is a poor heart that cannot appreciate his flashes of humor ind the depths of his intense sympathy ind pathos. Sincerity runs through ivery line and wisdom and truth shine brough every completed poem. He tands out strong and clear as the litter opponent of all sham, pretense, ant and humbug. His shafts of atire against these vicious failings of lumanity are recognised as classic by nasters of the art. But satirical hough he may be and strongly is when ccasion demands he never degener ites into pessimistic cynicism. Even n his darkest moods he is hopeful with he same characteristic strength of HEARING ON PETITION OF U. M. surpose and principle which made him he man first and the poet after. Doubtful too he is at times but not opelessly so. He has that at the very oot of his character "that makes cotland beloved at home revered lbroad" a faith in the Divine overind finite understanding he cannot tnow but in his soul has to acknowldge. There are those probably actusted by jealously pdompted by ignorlimost every city of any importance i hase United States, during this week housands of Scotchmen are meeting to honor his memory? And not in the lities alone, but in small towns where wo or three Scotchmen can gather toether there too is the immortal membry of the bard honored and the fire f his fame renewed. Not only so but Americans born with English, Irish and Welsh admirers vie with his counlrymen in paying tribute to the name of a man almost as much their own now as he is Scotland's. The reasons or his popularity are many but to my mind the one outstanding reason is that there is something in his works everybody. You may admire his poems, and his songs. You may love als epigrammatic satire I his wit and humor. You may idolize him as the champion of sturdy manhood, I as the master poet of the "lover and his lass." And so on all through the long list of his themes. Is it classic poesy you are fond of where can you find any-hing better than "The Cottar's Saturlay Night?" Of do you prefer a wild anastic humor, a tale of witches and devils, surely you have it in "Tam o'. Shanter?" Is it instruction and philoophy you are looking for, they are to found beautifully expressed in "Man Was Made to Mourn" and "The Epistle to a Young Friend." Do you want to earn of the sins and short comings of the idle rich of the poet's day, then peruse "The Twa Dags?" Are you doubtful as to Burns' attitude towards the ignoble rich, the pomp and glitter of mere human power then read my friend "read mark and inwardly digest." "A Man's a Man for a That." But what need to go on. I give you no jaundiced advice. If you read any- under balmy skies. You know as well as I do that if all his works should be destroyed his memory would be kept green alone by that grandest song of friendship and fraternity "Auld Lang Syne" St. and Broadway. Ingold, Mgr., Hamilton, Bermuda ganizations in America,—the Elks. But his works can never be destroyed while there lives a true hearted Scotchman. They are indelibly printed in the hearts and minds of his countryman and this is the best memorial he could have wished. No need for anyone to attempt to say anything new of his songs. Libraries have been written about them and all the world of English speaking people know and love them. The sublimity of tenderness pathos love and loyalty has never been more sweetly sung than by Robbie Burns. Lovers sing them to their lasses, old men croon them to their agid sweethearts, mothers hush their babies to sleep with snatches of the dear old love songs, and men in the battle of life cheer their souls with a draught of them. The man or woman could bill, and perhaps it would be too mire the man who so unmercifully flayed them. But the honest and right minded of all classes in every corner of the civilized world are paying tribute these days to the immortal memory of the sweet singer of Scotland, the poet of nature and manhood, the champion of honest worth and equal justice, Robert Burns, the plouchman The anniversary celebration in this city will be held under the direction of Clan Campbell in Eagles' hall, Friday
